

Appreciative Inquiry into Community Nursing for Children and Young People

Launch Event
June 2015

Aims of today's session

- To set the scene so that you understand why the inquiry is happening and how you can be involved
- To give you the opportunity to share information about current community nursing services for children and young people from your particular perspective
- To enable us to shape the rest of the inquiry so that we get to hear the things you want to tell us

An introduction to the inquiry

Tracey Matthews

The bigger picture:

putting the inquiry into context

- NHS Changes to responsibilities for commissioning children's services
- The Special Education Needs and Disability (SEND) reforms

Appreciative inquiry: a positive approach to change

Involves working with and listening to service users, staff, other stakeholders

Focuses first on what is working well

Ensures good practice is retained and built on as change takes place

What's on this webpage?

An Appreciative Inquiry (AI) is a change management approach that helps organisations to connect with service users and other stakeholders - to identify what is working well, understanding why it is working well and then doing more of this in the future.

This page provides access to dates of local AI activities you can get involved in, guidance notes, presentations and other supporting documentation. Scroll down this page to find:
